CLEAN STREAMS PARTNER AWARD

Clean Streams Partner Award was created by the Partners for Clean Streams Board of Directors in 2007 to honor individuals and/or organizations in our community that have through their efforts worked to improve our rivers and streams.

Previous recipients
have included:
2007 - Sue Horvath
2008 - John Jaeger
2009 - Marilyn DuFour

THIS YEAR'S AWARD IS PRESENTED TO . . .

2010 CLEAN STREAMS PARTNER

Tom Henry

Tom Henry has been a journalist for 29 years and created The Blade's environment beat when he was hired in 1993. He has written about mass murderers, businessmen, some of the nation's top politicians and a bevy of rock 'n' roll stars. He is particularly proud of writing one of the longest, most comprehensive and obsessive articles about the history of pinball ever to appear in a newspaper, not to mention his 1984 first-person story as a hot dog vendor at Detroit's Tiger Stadium.

He began writing a column about the environment for The Blade's Sunday paper in 2007, in addition to his ongoing coverage of that subject. His first major series at The Blade was about the longstanding abuse of Toledo area waterways. Tom has spoken at national conferences and at major universities about the Great Lakes and energy issues, his two favorite environmental topics. In 2008, he spent 10 days in Greenland researching a four-day series on climate change that was recognized by the Yale Forum on Climate Change & The Media, the Knight Science Journalism Tracker, and Columbia Journalism Review. He was recently elected to the Board of Directors of the Society of Environmental Journalists, one of the nation's largest journalism groups. He has 3 dogs, 2 kids, and a wife. And a cat, too - the coolest cat ever - she's housebroken and does her business outside with the dogs.
